The ForHer (Focused on Resources in Health, Education and Research) is one of the Health Institutes at the University of North Texas Health Science Center. It is a collaborative model that incorporates clinical practice, education, research and community engagement to provide quality care for women.

The Prostitute Diversion Initiative—New Life Program is an innovative community collaborative led by law enforcement in Dallas that provides a complete exit strategy for street sex workers wanting to leave the sex industry. This presentation will demonstrate why the program was necessary, how the victim's approach model works, and present data of its successes. Also highlighted will be the recent state legislation resulting from the program. The objective of the presentation is to stimulate discussion on how other cities can leverage existing resources in their communities to support similar diversion models to aid high-risk vulnerable women on the streets.
